California Hospice Foundation Receives $30,000 NHPCO Grant to Advocate for Veterans Nearing End-of-Life

The National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization selected the California Hospice Foundation as one of six programs in the United States to receive a second year “Reaching Out” grant. The Project will continue to focus on both homeless and rural veterans from VISN 21 and VISN 22 and encompass hospice programs and veterans throughout California and Nevada.

We will work closely with the VA, local VSO’s and the California Hospice and Palliative Care Association (CHAPCA) to increase the level of awareness among community based hospice providers, that Veterans are a special needs group and target specific issues regarding rural and homeless populations. A group from VA and Hospice will collaborate to develop and present a core curriculum based on the 2009 VA and Hospice Working Together Project that will retain educational components about the homeless/rural veteran, information about accessing the VA system, information about successful VA/Hospice collaborations, a focus on key VA contacts, relationships and a multidisciplinary section regarding the clinical needs of veterans. Once the program is complete it will become a traveling road show and will be presented in 6 different areas.

The 2010 grant also allows us to continue our efforts to further develop mutual respect and understanding between Hospice and VA, and thus the local relationships that are essential if all veterans are to have access to quality hospice care in their own communities.

It's Never Too Late To Make A Will

Many people want to support the California Hospice Foundation but are unable to donate the amount they want to give while they are alive. Most donors have assets that are needed during their lifetime to cover living expenses, rising healthcare costs and the many other costs of every day necessities. Remembering the California Hospice Foundation in your will, living trust, or other estate plans is an easy way to make such a gift. A bequest through a will or living trust can be a stated sum of money, a percentage of your estate, a percentage of the residue of your estate after other bequests have been fulfilled, a specific asset such as personal or real property, or the portion of your estate that would otherwise be taxable. Please consider including us in your will or living trust. Your gift will honor the past as it benefits the future.

Before implementing any plans, be sure to seek the advice of your professional advisors.

Cicely Mary Strode Saunders - Founder of Hospice

Dame Cicely Saunders (June 1918 – July 2005) founded the first modern hospice and, more than anybody else, was responsible for establishing the discipline and the culture of palliative care. She introduced effective pain management and insisted that dying people needed dignity, compassion, and respect, as well as rigorous scientific methodology in the testing of treatments. She abolished the prevailing ethic that patients should be cured, that those who could not be cured were a sign of failure, and that it was acceptable and even desirable to lie to them about their prognosis.

She fought the notion that dying people should wait until their painkillers had worn off before they received another dose, and disagreed with the notion that the risk of opiate addiction was an issue in their pain management.

In 1967 she founded St. Christopher's Hospice in southwest London. It was her personal achievement and has been imitated all over the world. St Christopher's was the first modern hospice, although there were a number of homes in existence for the dying, most of which were run by religious orders. She raised the funds for the hospice and contributed some of her own money.

Saunders introduced the idea of “total pain,” which included the physical, emotional, social, and spiritual dimensions of distress. She regarded each person, whether patient or staff, as an individual to the end.

She developed breast cancer but continued to work, even from her deathbed. She died at St. Christopher’s in July 2005, at the age of 87. We each have much to thank her for.

“‘You matter because you are you. You matter to the last moment of your life, and we will do all we can, not only to help you die peacefully, but also to live until you die.’

—Dame Cicely Saunders, founder of Hospice

Grief

The death of a loved one is always very difficult. When someone you love is terminally ill and you must watch their health decline and often their suffering, it can be one of life’s most difficult experiences. How do you survive the ordeal and then how do you go on without a person who has been such a vital part of your life and world?

Grieving the loss and coping with the related changes is slow, hard work. Grieving is a very personal experience and while we have long known about the stages of grief identified by Elisabeth Kübler-Ross, we also know that each person grieves in their own way and in their own time. There is no ‘right way’ to grieve. Grief is not orderly and predictable; some people are able to handle it better than others, some go through the stages in order, some don’t. The only absolute is that grief lasts until it’s done.
